Strong user involvement and clear business objectives, both relying on efficient communication between the developers and the business, are key factors for a project’s success. Domain-Specific Languages (DSLs) being simple, highly-focused and tailored to a clear problem domain are a promising alternative to heavy-weight modeling approaches in the field of Web Engineering. Thus, they enable stakeholders to validate, modify and even develop parts of a distributed Web-based solution.

Further Information at http://mwrg.tm.uni-karlsruhe.de